

Grading Comprehension Skills

First Grade

When grading comprehension skills, first grade functions as a transition between the supported comprehension in kindergarten and the independent comprehension in second grade. Because of this, the way we assess comprehension changes after the first quarter.

First quarter process:

Students can have a story and questions read aloud to them by the teacher. Students then complete the written response independently.

Second-fourth quarter process:

Students need to independently read a grade level appropriate text, the questions, and write responses independently. If they still need the support as it was given during first quarter that would be considered as a level 2 for that skill.
